It's sad but true: here in this country, people are being bought, sold, and smuggled like modern-day slaves.

They are trapped in lives of misery — often beaten, starved, and forced to work as prostitutes or to take grueling jobs as migrant, domestic, restaurant, or factory workers with little or no pay.

We're working hard to stop human trafficking — not only because of the personal and psychological toll it takes on society, but also because it facilitates the illegal movement of immigrants across borders and provides a ready source of income for organized crime groups and even terrorists.

I. Introduction

Human trafficking is an egregious violation of human rights. San Francisco is known to be one of the top destinations in California for human trafficking because of its ports and airports, rising immigrant population, and large industries that attract forced labor. Survivors of trafficking have a number of unique needs, such as legal services, language education, job skills training, life skills training, trauma recovery services, and intensive case management. Though many service providers throughout San Francisco and the Bay Area provide services to survivors of human trafficking, few agencies receive funding specific to their work with trafficked individuals. Thus, it is difficult to fully understand the true scope of the issue and the actual need in the community.

Mayor Edwin Lee, the San Francisco Board of Supervisors, City departments, and community providers are committed to eradicating human trafficking and providing supportive services to survivors.

The Directory of Services for Survivors of Human Trafficking, 2013, now in its 3rd edition, is a preliminary step toward a coordinated response to trafficking. By highlighting the work conducted on behalf of survivors throughout the region, future efforts related to prevention, service provisions, and enforcement can encompass and enhance the dedicated work already in place.

It is time for our perception of human trafficking to evolve. This is modern day slavery and it is an issue of women's rights as well as human rights. We must do everything possible at the local, state, national and international level to stop human trafficking.

- Former San Francisco District Attorney Kamala D. Harris

II. The San Francisco Collaborative Against Human Trafficking (SFCaHT)

MISSION

End human trafficking through collaboration, education, outreach, advocacy and support to survivors by taking a zero tolerance stance on exploitation, violence, and the trafficking of humans.

ABOUT SFCaHT

SFCaHT envisions a local and global community that fully comprehends the value of each human life and abhors any practice that denies a person her or his right to live a life free from violence, exploitation, or slavery. To ensure this vision becomes a reality for San Francisco and beyond, SFCaHT is committed to preventing human trafficking, prosecuting traffickers, and protecting survivors of human trafficking by building a strong collaborative of anti-trafficking advocates and experts in San Francisco.

SFCaHT launched in January 2010 with a membership of over 20 agencies representing a broad array of nongovernmental organizations, government agencies, law enforcement agencies, service providers, educators, and community members.

III. Description of the Directory

The 2013 Directory of Services for Survivors of Human Trafficking represents an important tool for community members, City departments, criminal justice agencies, community-based service providers, health care practitioners, and mental health providers, offering the means to make accurate and effective referrals to survivors.

The Directory focuses on services provided specifically for victims of human trafficking, including, women, girls, men, boys, and transgendered individuals. Local agencies engaging in advocacy, policy reform, and technical assistance have also been included, as have local and regional coalitions against human trafficking.

Although every effort has been made to include as many organizations that provide services to survivors of human trafficking as possible, programs in the community frequently change, and alterations are expected in future editions.

Please contact the City and County of San Francisco Human Rights Commission with any modifications, additions, or deletions to the services listed by sending an email to hrc.info@sfgov.org or by calling (415) 252-2500.

IV. What is Human Trafficking?

The 13th amendment of the U.S. Constitution abolished slavery in 1865. Times have changed so much since the Abolitionist movement that many in this country do not realize that slavery persists internationally, nationally and in the City of San Francisco. Modern slavery comes in the form of human trafficking and forced labor.

In California, human trafficking is defined as “all acts involved in the recruitment, abduction, transport, harboring, transfer, sale or receipt of persons, within national or across international borders, through force, coercion, fraud or deception, to place persons in situations of slavery or slavery like conditions, forced labor or services, such as forced prostitution or sexual services, domestic servitude, bonded sweatshop labor, or other debt bondage.”

Sex Trafficking

This prevalent form of trafficking affects every region in the world, either as a source, transit or destination country. Victims from developing countries, and from vulnerable parts of society in developed countries, are lured by promises of decent employment into leaving their homes and travelling to what they believe will be a better life. Victims are often provided with false travel documents and an organized network is used to transport them to the destination country, where they find themselves forced into sexual slavery and held in inhumane conditions and constant fear.

Forced Labor and Debt Bondage

Victims of this equally widespread form of trafficking come primarily from developing countries. They are recruited and trafficked using deception and coercion and find themselves held in conditions of slavery in a variety of jobs. Men, women and children are engaged in agricultural and construction work, domestic servitude and other labor-intensive jobs. They are required to work, against their will, for little or no compensation. This type of crime has been apparent in Asia for many years and has now taken hold in Africa as well as Central and South America. The phenomenon is promoted by the growth of inexpensive air travel and the relatively low risk of prohibition and prosecution in these destinations for engaging in sexual relations with minors.

Trafficking in Organs

Trafficking in humans for the purpose of using their organs, in particular kidneys, is a rapidly growing field of criminal activity. In many countries, waiting lists for transplants are very long, and criminals have seized this opportunity to exploit the desperation of patients and potential donors. The health of victims, even their lives, is at risk as operations may be carried out in clandestine conditions with no medical follow-up.

V. The Statistics behind Human Trafficking

Sex trafficking disproportionately affects women and children and involves forced participation in commercial sex acts. In the United States, any child under the age of 18 who has been involved in a commercial sex act is considered a trafficking victim. Women and girls make up 80% of the people trafficked transnationally. Yearly, traffickers exploit 1 million children in the commercial sex trade. However, survivors of trafficking also include men and children, and these survivors are exploited by any number of means. Below are recent statistics published by the United Nations Global Initiative to Fight Human Trafficking (UN.GIFT) on just how prevalent human trafficking is in the world.¹

The Countries

As of 2008, an estimated 2.5 million people are in forced labor (including sexual exploitation) at any given time as a result of trafficking. Of these:

Asia and the Pacific	56%	1.4 million
Latin America and the Caribbean	10%	250,000
Middle East and Northern Africa	9.2%	230,000
Sub-Saharan countries	5.2%	130,000
Industrialized countries	10.8%	270,000
Countries in transition	8%	200,000
Number of countries affected by human trafficking by being a source, transit or destination count: 161

¹ Human Trafficking: The Facts, Published by UN.GIFT (2008). For a copy of the report, please visit www.UNGlobalCompact.org.

The Victims

The majority of trafficking victims are between 18 and 24 years of age 5. An estimated 1.2 million children are trafficked each year. Of these:

- 95% of victims experienced physical or sexual violence during trafficking (based on data from selected European countries).
- 43% of victims are used for forced commercial sexual exploitation, of which 98 % are women and girls.
- 32% of victims are used for forced economic exploitation, of which 56 % are women and girls.

The Traffickers

Of those recruiting victims, 52% are men and 42% are women. In 54% of cases, the recruiter was a stranger to the victim while in 46% of cases, the recruiter was known to victim.

The Profits

As of 2008, the estimated global annual profits made from the exploitation of all trafficked forced labor are US $31.6 billion. Of these profits:

- 49% ($15.5 billion) is generated in industrialized economies;
- 30.6% ($9.7 billion) is generated in Asia and the Pacific
- 5% ($1.6 billion) is generated in sub-Saharan Africa.
- 4.7% ($1.5 billion) is generated in the Middle East and North Africa.
- 4.1% ($1.3 billion) is generated in Latin America and the Caribbean

The Prosecutions

In 2006 there were only 5,808 prosecutions and 3,160 convictions throughout the world. Put another way, for every 800 people trafficked, only one person was convicted in 2006.

In the U.S., 27% of trafficking victims are under age 18 and nearly 2/3 are under age 24.

Over half of the reported trafficking victims in 2007-2008 were U.S. citizens.

Website	www.becausejusticematters.org
Agency Description	Because Justice Matters began as a simple dream to address injustice faced by women here in San Francisco. Our founder, Ruthie Kim, had been living and working in the Tenderloin district of the city for 8 years, witnessing the exploitation and isolation of the women she was reaching. In 2008 we started working towards raising awareness of issues of trafficking and domestic violence, presenting to churches, youth groups, local schools and colleges. We started as a small team, taking small steps and have gradually gathered momentum. We believe in genuine relationships that are built over time, with a commitment to help women make choices that build a better life for them and their families. We want to see hope and dignity restored to every victim. We want to see systems change that benefit the abused and not the abuser. We want to see justice for every individual and every family. We are committed to the small steps that offer simple solidarity to someone in need as well as the large leaps that seek to end injustice and hold the guilty responsible.

IX. Advocacy Agencies

Advocacy Agency	Alliance to End Slavery and Trafficking
Address	1700 Pennsylvania Ave, N.W. Suite 520 Washington, DC 20006
Phone Number	(202) 503-3200
Email	info@endslaveryandtrafficking.org
Website	www.endslaveryandtrafficking.org
Agency Description	ATEST is dedicated to ending modern-day slavery and human trafficking around the world. The fact that the enslavement and trade in human beings exists in our modern world as a disturbingly large, highly profitable illicit industry is unacceptable. Legal nowhere and present in every country across the globe, slavery damages our communities, taints the products and services we consume, tarnishes the profits we earn, and is one of the most pressing human rights challenges of our time. By collaborating with each other, peers in the movement, survivors of slavery and trafficking, policymakers, like-minded activists, and business and thought leaders, we seek opportunities to create positive and enduring change—including building the fundamental legal, corporate, and cultural standards that will end modern-day slavery and human trafficking in all of its forms.
Hours	Monday - Friday, 8:00 am - 5:00 pm
Advocacy Activities	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Build peace and advance human rights • Strengthen U.S. laws and increase federal resources dedicated to anti-trafficking efforts • Brings together prominent human rights and other groups to end slavery and trafficking

XI. California Regional Task Forces

In 2004 and 2005, the U.S. Department of Justice awarded grants to create six regional task forces in California to combat human trafficking. These task forces brought together law enforcement and prosecution officials at the local, state, and federal levels; as well as other governmental leaders, non-governmental organizations (NGOs), and academia to create a victim-centered, collaborative approach to human trafficking. In 2009 and 2010, the California Emergency Management Agency (CalEMA) provided supplemental funds to the original six task forces and also created three more task forces. These task forces sum up their approach to human trafficking with three “P’s” – Prevent, Protect, and Prosecute.
