

Sheri Shuster is an Iranian-American human rights documentary filmmaker, born in Jerusalem and raised in Los Angeles. From 2008-2012, she served as a Director of Covenant House California in Oakland, part of the largest nonprofit agency in the Americas to serve homeless and trafficked youth. Her experiences there inspired her to create Still I Rise - a documentary about the resilience of human trafficking survivors.

Sheri is an alumnus of U.C.L.A. and the Evans School of Public Policy and Governance.
